Oh No, It's Poetry is a short collection of 15 poems which are perfect to either read aloud or enjoy quietly to yourself. Aimed at children, the poems will appeal to a wide audience and will be enjoyed by anyone who is still a child at heart. Some poems are short and funny, some are longer and tell a good story, some are educational and some are just nonsense. They are written to entertain and delight you all - from The Circus Train to The Tin Opener to a haiku set in The Playground, there is a variety of themes to amuse you. Each poem is followed by a simple illustration which picks out a few words or ideas from the rhyme. Most children grow up with a love of nursery rhymes but poetry often takes a back seat as the child grows older. In this book, her first collection of poems, Tula Jack aims to make poetry fun for all. As her subtitle says - Don't be Glum, Poetry's Fun.
